MVA Opens New Branch Office in Shanghai

MVA (“MVA” or the “Company”) is pleased to announce the new branch office opening in Shanghai today, which symbolizes further expansion of the company’s network to cover larger part of China.

China has been a very important market for MVA with the rapidly growing traffic engineering and transport planning market. MVA conducted its first transport study project in Beijing in 1988, and first built its presence in China with the setup of the Shenzhen office in 2003. MVA subsequently opened its Beijing branch office in 2007 to support for clients in the north of China. Now with the Shanghai branch office put into operation, clients in the Yangtze River Delta can be further benefited with the services and support provided by MVA.
