

SYSTRA RECERTIFIED FOR ITS ANTI-CORRUPTION MANAGEMENT SYSTEM

9 December 2021 - SYSTRA, already certified in 2020 for its anti-corruption management system in France and India, has had its ISO 37001 certification renewed in these two countries and extended to the UK and Ireland.

The international certification body Eurocompliance has renewed the ISO 37001 certification of the SYSTRA Group in its French and Indian subsidiaries and extended it to its subsidiaries in the United Kingdom and Ireland, following an audit of the anti-corruption management system.

For Jérôme Hernot, Group Compliance Officer, "in 2020, SYSTRA was the first engineering group to be certified for anti-corruption in France, as well as in India. In 2021, we are confirming our determination by extending this scope to the United Kingdom and Ireland.

For Pierre Verzat, Chairman of SYSTRA's Executive Board, "SYSTRA has made ethics one of the pillars of its action. This certification is further proof to our clients, employees and shareholders of our continued commitment to the highest ethical standards."

The purpose of ISO 37001, published in 2016, is to "define requirements and provide guidance for management systems to help organisations prevent, detect and combat bribery and corruption, and to comply with anti-bribery laws and their voluntary commitments applicable to their activities."
